There are problems loading pages, and navigating content, and they take a lot of space on the device's storage. An alternative would be to view the same content from your desktop (e.g. on a Windows PC), but with a much better experience than on a phone. Dual regulatory roles for nitric oxide in mitogen-activated protein kinase signaling in endothelial cells. Mitogen-activated protein kinase (MAPK) cascades are critical intracellular signaling systems activated in response to stress and developmental cues and tightly regulated in endothelial cells (ECs). A small conductance  $Ca^{2+}$ - and voltage-gated  $K^+$  (SK and IK) channel inhibitor, charybdotoxin (ChTX), and an adenylyl cyclase inhibitor, forskolin, at 10-30  $\mu M$ , reduced stress-activated extracellular signal-regulated kinase (ERK) and protein kinase B (PKB/Akt) phosphorylation in ECs. ChTX and forskolin each elicited a rapid (within 1 min) and transient phosphorylation of the IK and SK channels by serine residues in ECs. Nitric oxide (NO) modulates both ERK and PKB/Akt signaling in ECs. Therefore, ChTX and forskolin were used to examine their effects on ERK and PKB/Akt signaling in ECs preincubated for 60 min with 10  $\mu M$  L-NAME (N(G
